blems and joys, chimes and a cultural center, pedestrians and bicycles, cars and bars, "the finest university in the world" were predicted for the residents of McKownville by Colonel Walter M. Tisdale of Guilderland, assistant to the president of the State University.

Colonel Tisdale spoke on the "New University Campus and Its Impact on the Community" before the annual meeting of the McKownville Improvement Association on May 21. He began his presentation by showing colored slides of the model of the new university campus which is scheduled for completion in 1966.

The slides showed "academic podium," a columned complex of classrooms, lecture halls, student union, theater and million volume library surrounding a courtyard where a 150 foot carillon tower is reflected in a broad shallow pool. Thence the chimes which Colonel Tisdale assured would be "toned down to make everyone happy."

The four "skyscraper" dormitories will house 4,800 of the 10,000 students expected to be attending the university by 1970. A little over a year from now, in the summer of 1964, one of the dormitories must be completed enough to house 524 students. By January 15, 1965 the last dormitory unit will be finished.

Classes will start in McKownville in the fall of 1965 and the entire campus as it is planned today will have been constructed by the fall of 1966.

Among the problems that Colonel Tisdale envisioned when 10,000 students moved into the area bounded by Western and Washington Avenues and Fuller Road was what to do about the bicycles and pedestrians streaming in and out of the campus. Sidewalk and bike paths would seem to be necessary. This problem must be solved by the town's residents, Colonel Tisdale said. But he offered the university's moral support "and maybe a little financial." He questioned the adequacy of the public transport system in the area and wondered if local churches could accommodate the religious portion of the student body. "You can expect cars and bars" he said. "How you handle them is your business but we're going to be very much interested." Restaurants will thrive and more entertainment facilities will be needed, the Colonel added. He said the campus would have its own fire fighting equipment and ambulance.

Questions from the audience elicited these answers: that fraternities and sororities would be housed on campus, that the university would not take over private homes for faculty housing (Colonel Tisdale assured his listeners that their homes would not be needed "in your lifetime or mine."), that the Western Avenue entrance to the campus would be in the vicinity of the old Albany Country Club entrance.

"We need your assistance" the Colonel concluded "and your understanding. —Don't jump on the first thing that happens. — Be understanding. Be helpful. — For our own salvation we'd better see to it that it all comes out right."

During the business meeting which followed Gerald Hame was elected president of the McKownville Improvement Association; Charles Maneri, vice-president; Florence Choules, secretary and Verla McCarville, treasurer. John Feldman, Francis Purdy and Robert Quackenbush were elected to the board of directors.
