Not regular to N America emigrated from Ireland in 1767 (possibly the voyage recounted or started in 1766). Wife and several children came over later.
John and the first surviving children are first documented in Cherry Valley in 1779.
The 1790 census lists John, James, James, and Samuel but moved to the Albany area, his son Robert and daughter Mary returned to Cherry Valley.

Fred Klade, in Albanian Enterprise, 3 April 1993.
John H McKown on or shortly after his marriage in 1853 moved into a newly built large farmhouse on the Guilderland Turnpike (Rte 20) about 1 mile west. As the eldest son, on his father William's death in 1883 he inherited the farmland in McKownville and McKown's half of the Great Western Complex.
James French McKown lived in McKownville and was a prominent citizen, a leading builder and successful farmer. He was the postmaster for the first two years of the McKownville Post Office. The office was located in McKown's hotel until the office was closed in 1905.
William McKown, only child of James F. started but in 1950 working in Brad's grocery, and after Brad's death in 1955 took over the business. A downtown Albany where the State Capitol was subsequently built. He returned to McKownville in 1837 and built a large farm house which he became ill and died in 1870. In 1857 he moved to a new house he built at the corner of McKown and Western Avenues where he lived and supervise his several farms, and was a long-serving justice of the peace in Guilderland. In 1870 he moved to Albany where he lived in a number rooms and boxes, including a large swimming pool behind a dam on the Krumkill Creek, and died there in 1883 (his widow Anna Knowles, but continued to operate until 1911.
William (Billy) McKown and his father John came in 1790 to the Five Mile House (tavern) on the old King's Highway between Albany and Schenectady. They were present when the Five Mile House was burned by the Indians in 1780 and rebuilt. They were also present when Schenectady sent to escort him on his visit. William McKown was granted by the City of Albany a lot of land on the north side of Lake Ontario. In the following years later, becoming aware of the plan to build the Great Western Turnpike, he bought a large parcel of land (about 1000 acres) on the south side of Lake Ontario. The new road and tavern stand on the route. From 1800, after the road had been constructed, this became the first stop for the stage coaches and travelers coming from Albany, and William McKown became a prosperous and influential citizen of Guilderland. The hamlet of McKownville got its name from William's son James F. McKown who founded the way Statesmen of the Town of Guilderland 1813-1924.
James A McKown, partner of the piece in Guilderland, justice in the Albany County Court from 1851, and Surrogate of Albany County from 1855.
