

Alleged burglar caught

In the same McKownville neighborhood and on the morning after a charred body later ruled a suicide was found, police arrested a man they believe is responsible for a string of burglaries..

The man David A. Hollenbeck, 44, of 1939 Seventh Ave. Watervliet was caught at a residence, police said.

At 10:08 a.m. on April 15, a neighbor of a house on McKown Road called police after witnessing a white man enter a duplex. When police arrived, officers said they observed a man exiting one of the two apartments but he returned inside upon seeing the police. Members of the Guilderland Police Department assisted by the State Police and the University at Albany K-9 unit entered the apartment and after a brief search, officers located Hollenbeck crouched by a bed and took him into custody without incident. Hollenbeck had prepared to take assorted jewelry and a piggy bank, police said. He was arrested for second-degree felony burglary.
