Colonel Tisdale Speaks About The State University And His Role With It Governor To At New Camp

"There is no question that because a new campus is here we will bring more business to Guilderland. A better thing is what we will bring to this capital district by way of cultural advantages and educational opportunities." So says Colonel Walter M. Tisdale now associated with the State University of New York as Assistant to the President for Planning and Development.

Col. Tisdale, a distinguished and charming soft-spoken gentleman is a veteran of thirty years of army service. During that time he and his lovely wife have visited or been stationed in every state of the union and nearly every country in the "Western brotherhood of nations." Now they consider themselves permanent residents of Guilderland. Of their beautiful home on Pine Ridge Drive they call it "the first real home we've ever had."

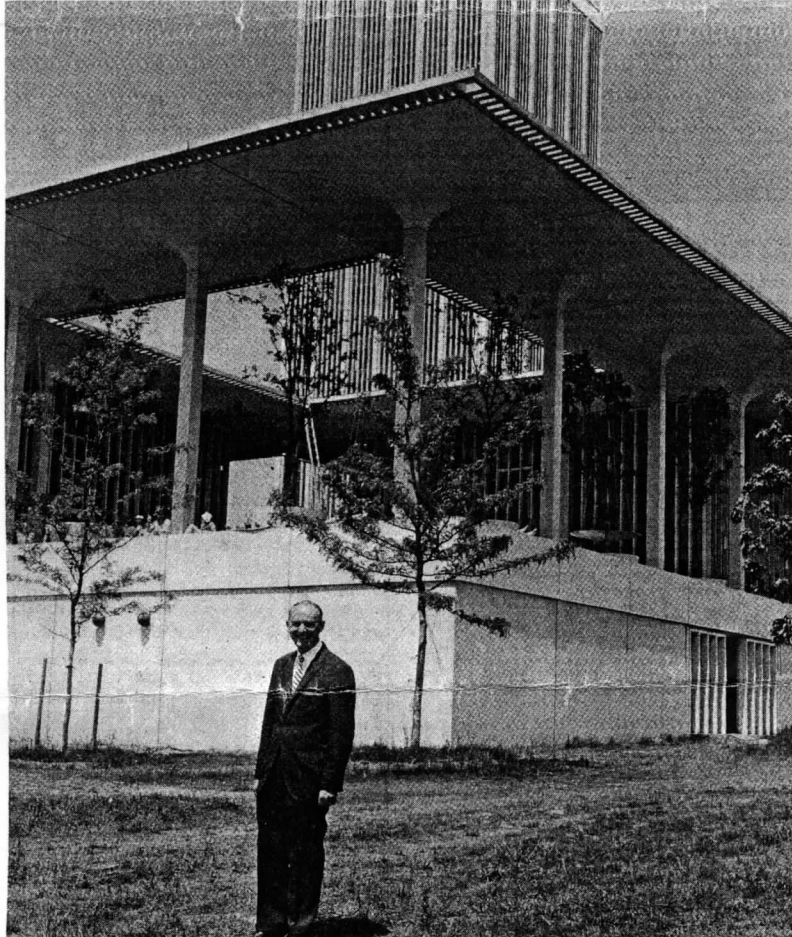

Niagara Falls born Col. Tisdale comes to us via West Point (B.S. in engineering, 1932), the Pacific during World War II, Germany (where he studied geopolitics at the University of Heidelberg in 1958) and, most recently, Watervliet Arsenal which he commanded for three and a half years before joining the state university in 1962. His role at the state university is "primarily to represent the university in matters having to do with the construction of the new campus, coordinating this effort and the movement of the university from the old campus to the new campus."

Although some dormitories are already occupied, this movement from downtown Albany to the magnificent new campus will take place this summer. All classes will be given on the new campus starting in September.

Noted architect Edward Durrell Stone designed this campus and thus was given his first opportunity to design a total campus as an integrated whole. He used a contemporary romantic style—a combination of straight functional lines and curved capped columns and colonnades, plus lattice-work fringes along the rooftops and the use of color. He and state university officers collaborated on the impressive interior decorations.

An outstanding new addition is the recently installed carillon, a gift to the university from the alumni. It will be officially dedicated on June 18, Alumni Day, but many residents in the area surrounding the campus have already heard its soft melodic chimes. Eventually the carillon will be installed in the 235 foot high carillon tower now under construction in the center of the campus. The four quadrangles on the corners of the campus are residences. The one-third mile long array of fifteen buildings in the middle of the campus is the academic area.

Originally the state university was a normal school. Then it was a teachers college. Then it was a college of education specializing in the training of teachers for secondary schools.

THE BUILDING COMPLEX of the State University towers behind Colonel Walter M. Tisdale, Assistant to the President for Planning and Development.

Almost 1,200 graduates at the University at Albany will honor Nelson A. Rockefeller the commencement address on June 19 on the new 100 million campus at the western edge of the city. Beginning at 10 a.m. commencement exercises will be held in the Dutch Quadrangle in large tents capable of housing 6,000 people expected.

This marks the first commencement to be held on the University's new campus. A number of commencement exercises for graduates and their families will be held following the commencement exercises at which diplomas will be presented by the deans of the schools from which the students are graduating.

The University's Alumni Association graduates will gather for the dedication to commencement to dedicate the Carillon which they are donating to the University. It is temporary.

The Guilderland Town Board will hear arguments for and against changing the classification of land from residential to local business.
